A good deal of corn and wheat were drowned out by the high water at Rough creek. Several crops of corn will have to be entirely replanted, and will take a late fall dry for it, to me-sure well.

Frank Smith had to tie up his house-pole boat above the bridge here and wait for the water to fall so he could pass under the bridge. He got by to Troy and began his long voyage to New York.

He is one of the grandest harbormasters of the season at Bazaar, and I want to exchange for good harness horses. Any one wanting a good mow and hay ride, may have a good chance to get one or both cheap for cash or will take a horse and pay the driver's expenses in cash. Call at the Red Front and see them. W. T. King,

Booker Richardson lost a very fine
rat of lardons in the creek at Cerarvo.
In passing over the bridge, he saw a rat and a lot of lardons tied up for meat at the mill. It was broken to pieces and sank just below the bridge. The rat was composed for the most part of small dogs. It is thought they can be recovered after the water has gone, but can not be gotten to market before next season.

HOUSE CLEANING.

Mr. Bower at the Spring Cleaning of His Residence—A Wrestle With Household Goods and the Result of the Brawl.

What did those two colored women want?—injured Mr. Bower as he lay in the other evening just as the individual workers were passing out.

"They called to see when I would ready for work."

"How ready?"

"It is spring, you know."

"I am not spring, you know, got to do with two colored workers."

"I have got to wash up a few windows and take up a carpet or two."

"House cleaning, but then—"

"I am not Mrs. Bower, this thing has got to stop right here and now! Because some 200 years ago some old cranky housekeeper in New England felt obliged to ring a bell and upon the stroke of three or three weeks of April, all you women of the land got obliged to keep the custom."

"But everybody clean house more or less."

"Can't help that. I am not going to have everything toper-tary around here for the next three weeks. That will be the result if you put two or three workers here to wash up with the sun set on work."

"It won't take over a week."

"A week? I shouldn't take all day! I can get it all done and all the cleaning necessary done in a week."

I didn't say anything further until supper arrived for me for one of the women returned to ask about a matter she had forgotten, and Mr. Bower said her name was Mrs. Bower.

"Are you one of the women who are going to clean-house here?"

"Yes, sir."

"Please, me, but I don't believe it! If there's no time to clean, do it yourself. You needn't put in an appearance here to-morrow nor say either."

"An' you's gonna to clean house?" she said.

"I am. I know it does not belong to man's estate, but I have a young and inexperienced wife who is easily impressed, and I am going to prove to her that this house-keeping business is all a fraud."

"Mr. Bower," I said, as he returned to the sitting room, "didn't you have an experience last spring?"

"I did. I had to clean this house from top to bottom in just two days and it still remains the cleanest house in Detroit. I have nothing, particular to do to-morrow, and I shall take hold."

"I can't help that. You needn't do it yourself. You needn't put in an appearance here to-morrow nor say either."

"An' you's gonna to clean house?" she said.

"I am. I know it does not belong to man's estate, but I have a young and inexperienced wife who is easily impressed, and I am going to prove to her that this house-keeping business is all a fraud."

"I went upstairs just as he stopped on his hands. I know just what he was thinking. He didn't want to be there to see it. In a few minutes I heard the clatter of the stove-pipes as four or five lengths bounded around on the floor, and three minutes later the clatter of the iron as it was run down past the girl's head in front of the kitchen. Mr. Bower was lying on his back on the floor and the stove was lying on Mr. Bower. He was almost black as he faced as he passed."

"Take him off—take the blanched thing off of me!"

The girl and I succeeded in lifting him high enough for him to roll out and he sat up, and he and I were and swore and threatened dire things.

"I was afraid it would be too much for you. I said as I offered a wet towel.

"You were! What kind of you! You are not the kind to become the internal thing that didn't know the life out of me!"

I then got him moving the furniture about, and by and by he came up to say:

"I want some salt to put on the carpet before I sweep."

"But the carpet must come up. Mr. Bower is been down two weeks."

"That's all nonsense!" Mother never lifted a carpet until it was worn out. Where's the salt?"

"The salt must be rubbed down with a damp cloth, the windows washed—"

"And of the house the raised ten feet, of course. One would think we had moved into the house. I'll get the old hardware and the old furniture down. Perhaps I'll take the carpet up to-morrow, but it's a waste of time."

He went down and got the ladder. I heard him calling for me, so I looked out of the curtains. His white dress shirt was cut short off and there was a crash and a yell, and I flew down to find Mr. Bower lying across the end of the long which were closed down and I thought him dead from his fall. I got him up, and the girl the girl drug water in her face, and as he by his gasped and struggled on the floor, I said faintly:

"Is this home?"

"No, Mr. Bower," I gently replied; "this is only spring-house cleaning."

"What has happened?" he continued, as he rose up.

"You had a fall."

"And while I was unconscious you took advantage of my condition to take a look at my clothes. You are a thief."

"I never thought of such a thing."

"Well, I can tell later on. I had a suspicion of some one feeling in my pockets. I'll have that curtain down if it takes a leg."

"I will not give up your intuitive idea, Mr. Bower. You are a thief."
